PERS provides archival and fulfillment services of Safety Data Sheets (SDS) for most of the products that our clients sell; however, there may not be an SDS available on certain products, such as “articles”, cosmetics, hair care products, personal care products, over-the-counter medications, food items and items widely known to be non-hazardous.

While an SDS will outline specific hazards, as well as steps to protect the user from these potential hazards, the product labels should be adhered to. In order to prevent injury or unnecessary exposure, the product should be used as the manufacturer intended and all warnings should be followed.

PERS disclaims any responsibility for, and makes no guarantees as to, the accuracy, formatting or OSHA/GHS compliance of each SDS.

Although PERS has made every effort to obtain the most current SDS’ available, we make no guarantee that each SDS is the latest, most up-to-date SDS available from the manufacturer.

If you are concerned, contacting the manufacturer directly may be an option to consider.
